

MULTI ASSET PLATFORM MODERATE FUND

OCTOBER 2018

FUND AIMS

Apollo Multi Asset Management LLP is pleased to have assumed responsibility for the investment management of the fund as of 15th November 2017. We will continue to run the fund within the current investment mandate with a very similar investment philosophy and continuing with the diverse multi asset nature of the fund. The Multi Asset Platform Moderate Fund (the "Fund") seeks to provide investors with medium to long term investment growth by investing across nine asset classes. Traditional asset classes are accessed through low cost index tracking techniques while alternative asset classes such as Absolute Return and Private Equity are accessed using active management techniques and skilled managers. The asset allocation of the Fund takes inspiration from the successful Harvard and Yale Endowment funds and is strategic and long term combined with disciplined rebalancing techniques. The Fund is 100% leveraged which provides investors with a market exposure of approximately 200% of their invested amount. Leverage will increase the risk and volatility of the Fund. It should be expected that 100% leverage will approximately double any performance gains as well as doubling any performance losses. The Fund offers monthly subscriptions and redemptions.

FUND REVIEW AND OUTLOOK

October saw volatility increase to levels not seen since March. The breadth of the sell-off was indiscriminate, as even the resilient US equity market suffered a large fall in value; the S&P 500 lost -9.30% at the peak (Source: Financial Express as at 29.10.18) of the sell off before recovering slightly at month end. The worst hit regions were Asia ex Japan and Europe, where the MCSI Asia ex Japan index dropped by -9.01%¹ and the Eurostoxx fell -7.02%¹. Global investors struggled to pinpoint a single catalyst behind the sell-off, rather a raft of influencing factors that together cultivated market frenzy. The ongoing trade tensions between the U.S and China combined with an increasingly hawkish Federal Reserve caused investors to question whether corporate profit expansion has come to an end. Conflict between the Italian government and the EU continued to weigh on investor sentiment as the EU rejected the Italians proposed 2019 budget, this marking the first time the EU has blocked a member states bid.

Over the month the Multi Asset Platform Moderate Fund returned -12.36%².

While we had been positioned for some kind of pullback from the record highs reached in the S&P 500 index during 2018, the scale and ferocity of the fall in October was somewhat of a surprise. While the sharp collapse in confidence emanated largely from the US in the form of uncertainty surrounding the US midterms, a hawkish federal reserve and ongoing trade tensions triggered by the White House, those markets that have already struggled this year, namely Asia and Emerging markets, suffered the most. Despite the bounce at the start of November, valuations in these regions are trading back at levels not seen since 2016. With the expectation of continued and strong earnings growth for the next few years, this now leaves, in our view, a very interesting opportunity to tactically increase our exposure to these markets. Elsewhere, we continue to diversify portfolios across absolute return and property to help reduce volatility as we see little value or protection in bond markets as we continue along the path to higher interest rates.
